

Visit to Archive and Reference Library, the Tank Museum, Bovington on Thursday 23 September 2010

Details

ADLG is pleased to announce that a visit has been arranged to the Archive and Reference Library of the Tank Museum, Bovington.

The Tank Museum's Archive & Reference Library is the world's foremost research centre on the subject of armoured warfare. More specifically, the resources held are directly related to the Royal Armoured Corps, especially the Royal Tank Regiment. International in scope and with a worldwide reputation, it is designated as a Place of Deposit for the National Archive.

The archive holds over a quarter of a million unique and historic photographs of combat vehicles, personal records and diaries of the Royal Armoured Corps, hundreds of books on armoured warfare and associated subjects and a collection of original tank drawings, plans and technical documents.

The visit offers ADLG members a tour behind the scenes of the archive in the company of the librarian, a look at collection management system and process and the opportunity to tour the Tank Museum itself in the afternoon.

Further details regarding the Archive and Reference Library and the Tank Museum can be found at <http://www.tankmuseum.org/home>
